

VOGUE FASHION

Roy Halston, photographed by Andy Warhol in 1974.

Jimmy Choo founder Tamara Mellon

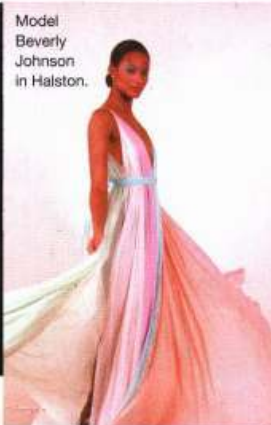

Harvey Weinstein with Marchesa designer Georgina Chapman.

LET'S DANCE

Iconic American label Halston will certainly have ample Hollywood connections and potential red-carpet power thanks to its recent acquisition by Harvey Weinstein. The movie mogul, who has teamed up with shoe maverick Tamara Mellon and Hollywood stylist Rachel Zoe, is looking to inject the house with the kind of energy it had during its heyday when its charismatic creator made off-the-shoulder numbers for the Studio 54 set. Mellon is said to be responsible for luring Marco Zanini, the former head designer at Versace, who joined Halston as creative director after signing off on Versace's spring show in September.

Jacqueline Kennedy's Inauguration Day hat, designed by Halston.

Model Beverly Johnson in Halston.

Halston at Studio 54 with Bianca Jagger.

From top: Fendi B bag, Marc Jacobs Stam bag and Chloé bag, all for hire from www.lovemeandleaveme.com

SWAP MEET

If you can't commit eternal love to an It bag this season, why not log onto www.lovemeandleaveme.com to hire (rather than buy) your pick of the moment.

MARCS NY '07/08

TOP BUYS

ARTFUL SMOCKS

With painterly dresses flooding winter runways overseas, we're seeing a deluge of pretty prints and sweet little Impressionist numbers in store.

Dries Van Noten silk dress, $1,375, from Belinda.

Marc's silk cotton dress, $299.

Megan Park silk dress, $845.

Zimmermann silk dress, $595.

ROY HALSTON: ANDREW COBBIS; GETTY IMAGES; TODD SUTHERLAND; CHLOE: NICKI ST. AUSTIN; MARCS: ANDREW COBBIS